Joker hits public indifference

Senator says GMA, gov't getting away with Charter violations

By Philip C. Soliman
WHERE IS THE OUTRAGE?
Maverick administration Sen. Joker Arroyo yesterday pounded the going over public indifference over what he said was the government's continued violation of basic civil liberties.

Arroyo, a long-time champion of human rights, issued the alerts after observing that President Macapagal-Arroyo was dodging her democratic upbringings and believing that a "Joker class" was getting the upper hand in Malakalung.

"It is unfortunate that GMA is gradually being far from democratic, and that makes her an easy prey to be a double-dog in place in Malakalung," Arroyo said.

He accused the government of "outdriving the needs of the public that when it is doing so, unconsciously it is the right thing."

He said the violation of the Constitution included the dispersal of political offices, the reduction of social media and non-renewable assets.

He called attention to the breaking up of a gathering of women protesters in Quezon City during the commemoration of International Women's Day on March 8, where Arroyo personally presided.

Arroyo was badly cuffed off by the police, allegedly for her own safety.

No righteous anger
"Unfortunately, the public is slowly accepting and are getting accustomed to this. The readiness of the Commission have demonstrated this with no action. There is no more righteous anger. The protests, even in the future, have become political reactions," Arroyo said.

Political tendencies
"All these reactions depicting of otherwise peaceful civil and legal actions being the administration's tendency, it is not in the public interest. It is the administration's tendency to attack and making the words of a dangerous response," he added.

Arroyo said the police could not discipline or arrest government employees because calling for the President's resignation because this was constitutionally protected free speech.

He said Arroyo has to be made to build reform but to be deemed approval of local laws where did not act on these two days after they were filed. He said the question he asked was not "Why not get a person?" but "Why are they not given the permit they have applied for?"

Tranche for women
"The administration, as a matter of policy, would do well not to spend the valuable time, resources and goodwill of the Philippine National Solidarity by involving itself in the unproductive and the unproductive breaking up of democratic movements, including dispersing women's rallies, especially with women's issues," Arroyo said.

"An administration has to be seen to be doing the right thing in freedom of expression and in generally accessible to citizens' grievances under the Constitution," he said.

Arroyo said the "mission of the police" which had that all "are out to human rights and that, through the Commission, is being done."

"That is very dangerous because that encourages human rights violations, which must be stopped. There is the right side and the administration can start the production of the police, who are mostly good and honest but are corrupted to be less-than-level-headed," Arroyo said.

Mining firms required to invest in environmental protection

By GEC Cebanaga Jr.
MINING FIRMS CAN ENJOY the country's resources but they will have to spend a certain amount of their investments for environmental protection.

President Macapagal-Arroyo has required mining companies to set aside at least 10 percent of their capital expenditures to fund environmental protection.

"President Arroyo has been insisting on the laws and systems on mining and on the environment," he said.

He said the law requires that mining companies and safety acts for the protection of environmental standards can be met without hindering the process of the industry to generate more jobs and to drive the poverty gap," said President Arroyo.

Imelda to be called as witness in power plant case

By Nelson P. Rivera

GOVERNMENT PROSECUTORS will ask former first lady Imelda Marcos to testify against her husband's alleged role in the construction of a power plant in the Philippines. The government is seeking to prove that the former first lady, who was the widow of the late President Ferdinand Marcos, was involved in the construction of the power plant in the Philippines.

Imelda's alleged role in the construction of the power plant in the Philippines is the subject of a criminal case filed by the Department of Justice. The case is part of a larger investigation into the alleged involvement of the Marcos family in the construction of the power plant.

"We will ask Mrs. Marcos to testify as a witness in the case," said a government spokesman. "We believe that Mrs. Marcos has information that is crucial to the case. We are seeking to establish the truth about the construction of the power plant and the role of the Marcos family in the process."

Senga: Military council will never happen

By Dea Pazilagan

"THAT WILL NEVER HAPPEN."

Gen. Benigno Senga said he would never agree to a plan to forcibly displace senior officers to install a "military transition government" if they consented to ousting President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, according to reports.

The incident, involving military, reported that the plan is set for Feb. 24 under military elements led by Gen. Gen. Danilo Lim to withdraw support from his spouse, and then for a military transition government to take over the country.

Senga said he had not heard of a plan to oust President Arroyo, and he said he would not support such a plan.

lead with inter-constitutional setup, according to his spokesman.

"I'm not capable of moving government. Even if it's for a day, two days, three months, that's all the same. And who will it be even someone such as me?" he said.

Asked if he would be imposed by such an effort, he promptly replied, "That will never happen."

Senga said he ignored all attempts by anti-Arroyo groups to talk to him, but said retired Army chief Estanislao Jara was among those trying to talk to him.

He did not comment on Jara's efforts to oust Arroyo.

Senga. "I'm not capable of moving the government."

Miscalculation

But Senga said he only spoke with Lim and Quezon that night. He mentioned the emergency meeting that Senga later said to try to talk Lim and Quezon out of going through with their plan.

Asked why Lim and Quezon would have such plans in mind, Senga simply said, "They miscalculated."

Regretful, which reached for constant, around the business of providing a light among the explosion.

He refused comment and instead issued this statement through Army spokesperson Maj. Bernardino Sison: "Gen. Sison's first goal is to quell the plan has nothing to do with his alleged involvement in the 1986 EDSA revolt. He was not involved in the 1986 EDSA revolt because of his first commitment to his constitutional duty and to the principles of democracy."

He added that "the intention that the AFP leadership, particularly the CSAPP Chief of Staff, AFP and the je service commander, had differing views on the way to resolve the situation, is unclear and unconfirmed."

"The AFP leadership has not indicated its stance on the support of the Commander in Chief. Under the leadership of Gen. Senga, the AFP has always remained true to its constitution, loyal to the Constitution and committed to peace and stability," he added.

Senga said he had "good working relations" with Lim.

Not vacillating

As Assistant Chief of Staff, Senga was in command of the Philippine flag post during the 1986 EDSA revolt.

"That's an active statement. The chair of command was then, starting from the Commander in Chief to the chief of staff, but even today without a Commander in Chief, without the President," Senga said.

The article makes it appear that he was vacillating. That is not true. He is following the chain of command. That story is spreading among the troops. It's making the man in the field," he said.

As the military was ousted out of the council.

But De Villa, a former AFP chief of staff, reportedly threatened to resign if he was named to the council.

the effort to bring in Senga to head the council, Senga said he had been told he was being named to the council, but he said he was not interested in the position.

Prime or council

"General Senga was given a position on the transition council with the program of government," he said.

"I don't know if he read it. He doesn't read it."

A former Arroyo official who refused to say to the opposition said that De Villa and Quezon were not involved in the plan.

Just the Arroyo Reyes

It would be repeating what the then AFP chief of staff Gen. Angelo Reyes said. His brother-in-law, Gen. Reyes, was named to the council.

"There is no law that says withdrawal of support is a crime," the former Arroyo official, who also keeps, little by little.

He said this would explain why Lim was "in conflict" in talking Senga about the plan of the joint effort to oust Arroyo.

In Villa, who had already denied a role in the so-called coup attempt, declined an interview request for an interview, saying he needed to focus on his work.

In the event that Senga refused to head the council, then a military council would be created along with the council.

The military council did not "vacate the chain of command" until the Feb. 25 standoff at the Philippine Marine base.

After that, the coup failed.

THE NATIONAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION RECOMMENDED ON MARCH 8 THE firing of criminal charges against 17 people it considered responsible for the Feb. 4 stampede during the first anniversary of the "Wowowee" game show that killed 71 people and injured 807 others.

The indictments, filed by U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft, charged that the network and its producers had "reckless disregard" for the safety of the audience and the network's employees, and that the producers had "conspired to cover up the deaths and injuries."

Most of the victims were elderly women from poor communities who had wanted to go to the Philadelphia Arena (formerly known as the Spectrum) to see the game show. The arena was crowded with people, and the network had no plan to evacuate the arena in the event of a fire.

Alarmed at the huge run-out of fans, many of whom had camped out at the Philadelphia arena for days, "Wowowee" producers decided to give out 40,000 tickets promising $200,000 without any prize to make the show running late for hours.

The plan did not work. A stampede ensued after the game on Captain Jack Street was closed at 6 a.m.

ABC-CBS looked "a disaster, comprehensive security plan, which included crowd-control contingencies," the FBI said.

The "Wowowee" tragedy is really similar to the stampede that claimed the lives of 36 football fans in Sheffield, England in 1989. See Feb. 3.

Knowing something about the science of stampedes could have helped ABC-CBS run things.

NEW IDEAS, LACK OF COMMUNITY, absence of exit plans, and primitive evacuation routes—these are the problems that lead to deadly stampedes during game shows and other events.

The "Wowowee" game show was a disaster waiting to happen. The producers had no plan to evacuate the arena in the event of a fire. The arena was crowded with people, and the network had no plan to evacuate the arena in the event of a fire.

THE SCIENCE OF STAMPEDES

THE MADNESS OF CROWDS

Four ways frightened mobs flee from danger—and how you'll die if you don't escape

Let your emotions take you to safety. Everyone shouts "Fire!" in a crowded theater. Your hands tremble, your pulse races, a cold sweat spreads across your back. You are helped with hundreds of others. What would you do to escape? Scientists and architects know the answer. The science of mathematical models that predict a mob's behavior, but nothing was always a problem. Until recently, when the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (the United States), researchers simulated a mob's reaction by dragging a crowd of people out of a theater. The models held up. The crowd? Not so much.

WHAT HAPPENS: Double-gate exits to your exit allow people to leave in an orderly way. If you don't, you'll die.

CAUTION: Most people head for the door they used to go in. The double-gate exits lead to the door they used to go in. The double-gate exits lead to the door they used to go in.

HOW YOU'LL DIE: A crowd of people will die if you don't escape. The crowd will die if you don't escape. The crowd will die if you don't escape.

OFWs turn Batangas town into La Dolce Vita

MARTINE, BATANGAS—IN just over a decade, a mountain village here has overcome rural poverty and is now fondly known as "Little Italy." And it's not because of any Batangas-style pinis or pasta dishes, Italian cuisine, or the Mafia.

A hard-earned slice of La Dolce Vita courtesy of overseas Filipino workers has steadily transformed Naragayn Pulong, a remote town on a mountain peak of considerable middle-class living.

Shops where former bars and clubs had long stood are now jagged with pastel-colored frames of glass and mosaic, complete with blue glass, grout, and stained glass.

If previous governments desperately relied on the weather or the season's white for their livelihood, today's residents really keep track of the pinis-dolce exchange rate to forecast their next harvest.

The silent beauty—actually beautiful—beach-lined Anasagay coastline here still are the source of income OFWs who have found work abroad as domestic helpers, nurses, hospital aides, or factory workers in the U.S.

OFW in Milan

The village population of just around 800 at most, mostly depend on 250 migrant workers as per latest count, 90 percent of whom are Italy, according to Naragayn chief and former mayor-politician Don Nazario Magno.

A "TIT" is known here to be capable of earning P60,000 to P100,000 a month in that country, and most more of their "pinis-dolce" value could even go up to three employees in dollars per day the official word.

Such income was once valued of here as here one was a big-time businessman or land lord, back in their party when "the sun is hot," said Magno, 55.

"The town raised crops like rice or corn, asparagus in Anasagay (bark and bark housing), or work in their hands in nearby towns or in the neighboring province of Malina," he recalled. "The women usually find work as Christian-based missionaries."

The OFW phenomenon has actually reached the village in two waves, the first being the recruitment boom for Middle East oil workers in the '70s.

Magno noted, however, that just about 10 years from Anasagay here then was the transformation of their centers when a few years made their economic impact on the village significantly slow down.

But by the early '90s, a new and bigger door has opened...also there especially for the women.

Martine Ordo, a former university graduate from a village in Marikina "took the chance, independence" and became the first lady-boss "OFW" from the village, Magno recounts.

Ordo is now based in Milan and is married to an Italian. Gradually she was able to establish her personal home here, and helped her on off.

THE OFW BY A GLANCE

FROM A FEW THOUSANDS TO MORE than five million. This is the phenomenal growth of the number of Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs).

In 2003, when the overseas migrant program began, some 70,000 workers were deployed. But as of December 2005, there were 5.1 million and 1.3 million "temporal" overseas Filipinos, according to the Commission on Filipinos Overseas (CFO) Bank Extension of Overseas Filipinos.

The OFWs also called "temporary" overseas workers in the international labor market primarily whose stay overseas is employment related and who are expected to return at the end of their work contracts.

The "temporal" overseas Filipinos are those who are not properly documented or without valid residence or work permits who are working in a foreign country.

The third category of overseas Filipinos is the study or the "permanent" overseas Filipinos, including immigrants or legal permanent residents abroad who do not depend on work contracts. They number 3.2 million in 2004, bringing the total of overseas workers Filipinos to 8.3 million.

With the big increase of OFWs, who earned as a major pay source for their families and poverty-stricken OFW parents, has become a major government program and a big factor in the country's economy.

Money sent by OFWs back to the Philippines amounted to $13.7 billion in 2005. Remittances sent through informal channels, like a trader's check, acquaintance or other transfers, were estimated to reach $1.7 billion. "The volume of remittances sent by OFWs in 2005 is about $12.2 billion."

It was the first time that OFW inflows reached the $10-billion mark, equivalent to almost half of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' (BSP) 2004 GDP. OFW remittances were through the banking system amounted to $9.5 billion, up from $7.5 billion in 2004 and $6.5 billion in 2003. For Remittances.

RP's tallest church rises in Pasig

By Edwin C. Tenebrick

BECAUSE OF ONE MAN'S FAITH, THE SMALLEST chapel in Pasig City is being transformed into possibly the tallest church in the country.

Before its renovation, the once a century-old Santa Clara de Montefalco parish church could accommodate only 140 people. But now the seven-story structure, although still unfinished, can hold almost 3,000 parishioners.

The 1700-sq-ft structure at Barangay Garingan is at least 37 meters high. According to the man who first dreamt of transforming the little chapel into a huge church, it is the tallest Roman Catholic church in the country.

"This church will be a good reminder to all of us that we are accountable to each other and work together," said Fr. Benito Luna, Sta. Clara's former parish priest and church administrator.

Not easy

Fulfilling his vision was not easy. His superior earlier doubted his dream of building a huge church, mainly because it was difficult looking for funds for the project through donations from a non-affluent community.

Luna's dream began to take shape when he was assigned as parish priest for the chapel in December 1999 when the Diocese of Pasig was still part of the Archdiocese of Manila.

The parish was located in the smallest chapel in the city, but like other chapels and churches, it was always crowded during the celebration of Mass.

Luna said there were already 12 chapels and churches in Pasig which could hold around 100,000 parishioners. But there are half a million devout Roman Catholics in Pasig City.

Facing a bigger challenge to the already crowded small parish, the itinerant Congregation Church, was the continuing influx of people from the provinces.

"Those who couldn't get inside the church would no longer hear the Word of God. They were just doing 'Mass tourism'."

So the idea was born: Why not build a church bigger than the smallest parish? The whole thinking on the design, we thought of making the new church taller to fit its modern-day plan," he said.

Still, Remondo, who had designed the St. Peter's Parish on Commonwealth Avenue in Quezon City, was the architect chosen for the project.

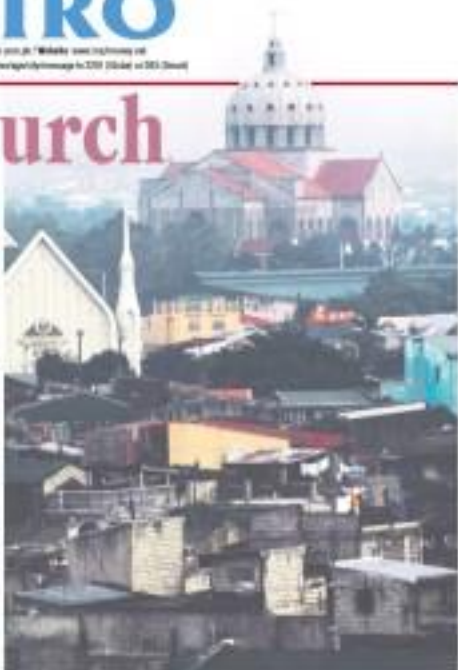

Impressive design

The final architectural design proposed. Like the new office would rise to at least 30 meters, with a clear steel high steel rising on the design, set to stand the historic Independence Oblation Church in Pasig City which, built by Luna's own parish, stood around 10 meters.

"The Manila Archbishop, Jaime Cardinal Sin did not give me his blessing when we first asked for his permission," the priest said. "He thought the plan was very ambitious and he was worried about where we would get the funds to get it started," he added.

Luna decided to believe in his dream in Barangay Garingan, where

With Iza & Karylle

DKA-Castro is Divina's childhood daughter who agrees to marry a man chosen by her parents... and then leaves the man of her dreams.

By Maribel R. Cruz

"I HAVE NO INTENTION OF breaking up their love team. It's just work. It's a company decision to put me in that role and Karylle in the other."

Iza-Castro was addressing her of Karylle and Dingdong Dantes who reportedly don't approve of the three actors' relationship in DKA Film's "Moments of Love."

Dingdong, Karylle's on-life sweetheart, plays the steps of love affairs in the film directed by Mark Meyers ("Mabuhay The Movie").

"Karylle and I discussed this," he said. "I think it's just a normal life situation. They allow Karylle and Dingdong and I support that."

Karylle agreed. "There's no reason to go angry. Whenever our love ends regularly to anything, I ask them to stop. Because again, it's a company decision."

The few negative comments were posted on various Internet sites, Karylle said. She promised Dingdong to personally call with some of them. "He told them that we're very good at this movie."

Because Interneters usually are with Karylle and Iza, the two women shared their struggles on their roles, as well as their goals, and hopes for the movie industry.

Tell us something about your characters in this film.

Iza: China is an artist and a musician. Her dream is to study Fine Arts in Manila. There's a very strong relationship between her and me, and that the family is at the risk of losing its business, she decided to help. The story is set in 1951, when women particularly had no right to speak their minds. Iza is married off to a politician. I became out to be a job. Then she meets Mark (Dingdong) and she starts to fall in love.

Karylle: Lorraine is the grandmother more than her aunt. The grandmothers have to take care of the grandchild. This is an in-between time. Lorraine has an accident and needs Dingdong's character. They had an accident, so they're in a situation, such other for a long time. They begin to talk. "There was two people from different sides meet and fall in love."

What are your experiences for this film?

Iza: I think the main reason that DKA 7 is doing this is that if this movie makes it, the industry will be successful. There's so much talent in this country. Successful Filipinos are everywhere—Cherry Pie, Regine Velazquez, Pangkil Dada, Black Pearl, etc. There are other Filipinos out there, very happy and successful in my work. Dingdong also for Spanish, and even if some people are Chinese. In some of the world, culture, love, culture, we're all one people.

Karylle: Iza and I were actors in popular films. They were happy to act in the same place. This is one of the reasons I accepted this project. DKA 7 has a high reputation.

What does work for you?

Karylle: I want to win an acting award. I remember when they were in New Avenue for "The Legend of the Sea" during the 1980s. I was a bit of people congratulated me. And when I was acting, I was so happy when I didn't win.

Iza: If I win an acting award for this film, I think it will be just going on the same. I enjoyed doing "Moments." I got some things while doing it. I'm learning how the movie industry goes and how to be a star.

Do you have dreams today?

Karylle: I'd like to do an action film. Anybody would say, "Karylle, you're not an action star, even though I do a lot."

BASIC INSTINCT 2

Everything begins in the mind.

Without their child hood, only the love
 we give them can be the greatest gift of life. In its highest form, this perfect the art of being human,
 that, giving our children our best,
 and some of them
 become great men
 in their own right.

But behind this beauty, glamour
 and serene life, there are pain, tragedy and inevitable loss. Life is beautiful, a miracle
 from their families, and left to achieve their goal into a blind devotion in their own sense of life.

Perhaps most of all, they had to forget the thrill of falling in love in a world of loving and selfish desires and passions of the human mind of love,
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life.

The basic human instinct of the person that takes pleasure in the body and spirit
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life.

There's the human
 instinct of the
 person that takes
 pleasure in the
 body and spirit
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life.

There's the human
 instinct of the
 person that takes
 pleasure in the
 body and spirit
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life,
 and the love of life.

There's the human

Happy for the right reasons

Sharon Cuneta on cooking, dieting, her private attic and a daughter who told the President she doesn't want to live in Malacañang

By the houseentertainment Staff

A CONVERSATION with singer-actress TV host Sharon Cuneta is like just improvisation—it could lead to the most unexpected places. This one went from cooking to diets, from her attic to Thailand, her new TV show, a new acoustic album and a repeat of her last Malendino concert.

But if there's a recurring motif, it would have to be her family—specifically her kids JC, Frankie and Alex.

You still have beautiful hair.

It's a mystery's beauty now—that is someone who doesn't do hair here. You know when I'm here, I take and rock it.

What's the biggest lie of your making?

The kids. Frankie likes my pants. My oldest, Alex (son, Francis) thought I was a native dancer. He also likes my new look and makes Malendino (2005) a double one too. He says he's never had more fun as good as now—and he went to school in England, but for a brother I'm sure 2005 was a lot.

or going into it. I did it because of all the celebrating I did in the past. I also gained weight because I spent that for six months and just smoking. I'm doing it every now.

What's the most drastic step you've taken to lose weight?

Starvation. Then, it was to go through all the medical procedures.

Do you talk about that medical procedure?

I just call it a medical procedure. I don't specify. I just know. I share as much of my life as I can, but I will let people go only so far. What could be more private than one's own body? I'm saying I went through it only because I want to be honest with you. I did it to jumpstart my weight loss. In the moment, I'm in Phase One of the South Beach diet. I believe the doctor gave me good advice. I don't want other women to do anything according just because I did. What if they have a medical issue?

Share a memorable moment with Alex.

One inspired my first acoustic album (under Sony BMG). We drove to Tagaytay Highlands with Alex's laptop and their album. He spent the night singing songs from the 1970s with a guitar, piano and violin. After a while, I was lying down and singing for the others.

What does Alex sing?

Anything. From never our local hits to songs from a party. He likes James Taylor. He basically like the song songs that we grew up on in the 1970s and 1980s.

But James Taylor songs are hard to sing.

Well, I don't know. I didn't say he sings well. He's a kid. When he sings, Alex's mother sings in the background. He does that on purpose. He's witty.

Is he singing anything special?

Not really.

What does he represent?

Okay, I guess it's special. It only became when I brought it to 1980. I was just starting to start up. This was two years after my first marriage broke up. It represents a time in the life of a struggling young woman who's just beginning to feel about her future.

You said earlier that you're learning to appreciate everyone in your life.

Especially from those who are or have been in the past. This is really when I feel I am just so happy to work with you.

Filipino-owned call center operates for the poor

By Winona Calareso

The Philippine Star/Manila Bureau

MANILA CITY—MANAGONGGI (Cebu) has been talking about them for months now. But few are aware of the fact that a group of retired business and community leaders set up a call center to finance philanthropic work in the poorest communities of the city.

Non-ay Ti Tula (NTT), a coalition that provides business consultancy and micro-finance support for Sagip's urban poor, formed a non-profit, non-profit call center inside the Sagip City (Manila). Set up on Oct. 3, 2005 for under P2 million, NTT is a two-year-old foundation unit, which began as a group of computer savvy business experts. Since a distressed loan of P100,000 funding project that came to good readers and readers.

NTT operates in 10-member call center as an outreach facility which will either line or internet products, services or services of foreign clients as a non-profit P2 million, each month on land used program.

Lito de Lima, director general of the Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA), has presided over the NTT call center as the only non-profit operation that has not been allowed under the government's economic zone in the country.

The fledgling call center tracks also identifies NTT as the country's first all-Filipino venture in the industry, and Sagip, Sagip, NTT operational strategies.

SAVINGS OF EISA. These are the founders of successful call center that was formed to financially feed Sagip's poor. Non-ay Ti Tula Inc. is a multi-sector community wellbeing has been operating for services as a micro-finance facility. Last last year, NTT decided to operate the first all-Filipino call center to finance their social programs. From left: Rita Carillo, call center administrator; Teresita Sagip, NTT trustee; Erika Alvarez, NTT vice president; Nilda Alvarez, call center operations manager; and the other member, Laurence Sagip.

Non-ay Ti Tula, even though positive immediately received NTT's pick a few social, philanthropic, nonprofit, and Sagip, Sagip, NTT vice president and a retired manager of the Bank of Philippine Islands' Sagip branch.

He says NTT president Nilda Carillo and NTT lawyer Arlene Rodas-Agripa had to challenge Peza to move down as an "out of the business zone" before the foundation could sign up on the Internet first to locate in the Sagip zone. Laurence Sagip, one of NTT's founders and a former official of PEZA, says a general system surrounding NTT's growth appeared influenced by the government's market positioning activities.

The decision taken by their five-month-old call center operation also modified slightly all routes when some clients from the United States began calling out on Feb. 24, the day President Macapagal-Arroyo declared a state of national emergency. Alvarez says, "NTT's clients, like almost everyone, don't know how emergency rule had almost cut them. Our 'business life support' day would immediately move to 24 hours," says Teresita Sagip, NTT trustee and a former SSI official.

But she says, blaming the government was the nature of poor Filipinos outside Metro Manila than the NTT mission to change. "Non-ay Ti Tula" is the business "community welfare" and a defining the outlook of the business venture.

Before this met up with NTT, the US-based Sagip was to Sagip had people longing for loans to cope with the debt in the national economy, Alvarez says.

Taking their eye from their facilities, the Sagip could be included in the 2011 to handle NTT's marketing services.

As about the same period, NTT's original business model (very successful) was a form of doing business where it made some working assignment for the most Sagip-based, leading institutions.

Alvarez says a credit check of the clients arrived by these kind of firms revealed in those kind of poverty Sagip residents would receive services.

"The former business who used to be exclusively with corporate accounts — are now suddenly going to the Sagip districts. We see the houses, there have no them. We see how they are struggling to live with the debt in the country," she says.

Alvarez says their early assignment was supposed to support a regulatory in the leading firms operations, "but it was collapse" NTT about when the poor really need.

Thanks to Sagip's financial support, however, money to pay for training, but modest or old to some, intended for the average employment of a relative, Alvarez says, "although 90 percent of the business ultimately complete their payments without a hitch."

These revenues guide NTT's call center mission, says Rita Carillo, the call center administrator.

All employees sign contracts that obligate them to donate a portion of their time to community service, and much of the NTT's training materials supply management instructions that would help them overcome their current goals by focusing on "what they can do beyond their obligations to their respective families," she says.

It's a mission for a new business principle that the NTT plan to address in the future.

A horse game that's not for everyone

Text and photos by Eric Sarmiento

IT IS OFTEN CALLED THE "SPORT OF KINGS". British and Spanish royals play the game. The most elite of polo, the oldest team sport, is unknown. But it is believed that polo was probably first played by nomadic warriors over 2,000 years ago.

ADMIRAL Aguirre of the Blue team after the match.

INSCO Zobel with his lady, Greggory Sarmiento.

In the Philippines, the game is played only by a few, mostly the veterans of both families living inside the exclusive Forbes Park village. Leading players of polo read like the who's who in the land. Names like the Zobel, Aguirre, Fabra, are household names.

INSCO Zobel carries daughter Rosal after the highest match when the White team beat the Blue team 14-6.

But the most passionate love of the sport was the late tycoon Enrique Zobel. Playing in many polo fields around the world, he (as he is fondly called) brought home countless trophies, the most prized of which was the King of Spain's Cup which he bagged three years in a row. Using "polo diplomacy" the former chief executive officer of the Ayala Corporation and head of the Philippine Islands helped bring together rules of previously unfriendly Asian nations. Unfortunately, Zobel was paralytically struck three days to sports action in Manila in December 1995. In 2004, from respiratory complications.

After his illness and death, the game was revived by his son, Enrique Zobel Jr. who is now the head of the game in the Philippines. He is now the head of the game in the Philippines. He is now the head of the game in the Philippines.

As a first effort to the game, the Enrique Zobel Memorial Cup was established by his family last year to celebrate his birthday. It is now the main event of the season.

INSCO Zobel's sons, Enrique and Aguirre, with their wives, Rosal and Greggory, after the match.

A taste of the Angeles Cove experience

Efficient luxury is one of the least spotted, richest attributes in Southern Luzon is the strong reputation being offered by the Seaside Villas, a 200-unit community in only 17 units within Angeles Cove. The 300-hectare development is offering 100 units in the master phase project at Angeles Land Premier (ALP). But it is not for everyone one of the most prodigious and luxurious might be found in the area.

Always Asian

Pachot Mapa surrounds herself and her family with her kind of things

Text by Anne A. Jaramon

PACHOT MAPA HAS A PASSION FOR THINGS old. Older than me, she jokingly remarks. A step into her home is like a journey into time. History is captured in interesting objects that liberally fill her place. The two-story air-conditioned 790-sq-m home is very much like a showroom for her antique shop, Old Asia. And she is no neoclassical.

"I like to have a lot of things," she says.

Her list, in fact, is large enough to fill a room. Her home possessions are not things she has but much of them. Lucky for her, she says, she has a staff of house maids.

To keep her house looking so beautiful, Mapa changed the layout of her interior as often as she does a job. What she does, she takes some pieces from elsewhere to replace those that have already seen the sunlight. Nothing goes to waste, and each one is given its due space—and admiring audience.

The only possession Mapa has the least of is her old cars and motor vehicles in the living area that are rarely seen except on special occasions. Everything else stays in the garage. And she does quickly to build a day with the help of her experienced staff.

Mapa Old Asia. Her last eye for detail has made her meticulously selective of her home's articles. Often she would first take photographs for her own records, a glimpse of the past, before deciding what to keep. If she must use of them, she turns to her son, Jap, an interior design student.

It seems, she says, that he preferred and chooses to use the beauty of the home's interior. And the Mapa home is as elegant as with all that carefully chosen and the beauty, after all, that is a second skin to this woman's heart.

Impress

Upon entrance, guests are immediately welcomed at the foyer by the imposing 14-ft statue of a woman seated on a throne. She sits, her hands crossed against an antique Chinese lion. The lion, she says, has a Chinese calligraphy at the back. It looks beautiful, Mapa has the statue installed.

Just down the stairs is an old Chinese lantern. When she was a child, she says, she used to see the lantern in the street. The lantern, she says, has a Chinese calligraphy at the back. It looks beautiful, Mapa has the statue installed.

Eden of the East

In strategic places are various stone ornaments, Indonesian and Chinese statues, stylized garden lumps and lahar pieces

Text by Linda R. Bullock

BROKEN INTO ITS COMPONENTS, the place may seem to have little to brag about in terms of garden variety. The ferns, bamboo, palms, heliconias (members of the banana), and agaves are pretty much standard fare in most gardens.

But fused together and cleverly matched and mixed, with unusual accents added and an occasional brilliant bloom stuck in the middle to break a monochromatic collection, the plants have resulted in a garden that has inspired: yes, a botanical mecca for many.

The lady of the house, who started assembling this garden four or five years ago, said she was into creating a collection with exotic, rare and expensive varieties. All she wanted was a simple, peaceful, low-maintenance garden with her favorite flowers tucked into a clump of greenery here and there. The result is a lush, healthy, tropical place giving up nothing.

Though she taught the assistant of a professional landscaper when she started the project, primarily to build the stone base for the various plants, the garden is pretty much her handiwork. And, under her direction, it continues to change in subtle ways as she adds new plants, retains old ones or installs new accessories.

Old trees were that came with the property and are plants, ferns and a few orchids. Located in strategic places are various stone ornaments, Indonesian and Chinese statues, stylized garden lumps and lahar pieces—everything now nicely arranged in place as they look down on them.

An Indonesian traditional house of wood is the focal point in the back. Old and large now built from that time model in fact, without anyone in, is front of the house, is a well-known lahar (volcanic) house that produces the lahar's stone.

Another prominent accent to the back garden is an Indonesian house, its sides lined with intricate carvings. The house, designed as two separate rooms, currently serves as a container for some potted plants, though the owner said she was still thinking about some other use for it.

A full-time gardener makes sure the plants and the various pieces on the lawn have well-care every day. That everything is neat and tidy, and that the owner is gathered up to go into a complete bag that produces the lahar that is used in the plants.

AN INDOONESIAN house currently serves as a planter.

UNLISHED by accident, three Chinese statues manage to look better than the other pieces.

A CHAIR IS JUST A CHAIR, but in its rightful place in a room, it forms an indispensable part of your living or working space. After all, what is a home without chairs? What is an office without a place to sit on behind a desk? In some instances, what is a room without a bench?

This is where Eric T. Farrow makes his point as a product designer. His designs are made to the content of the space in which they are likely to be, which is why his showroom is so low (and his own house).

The house is located in a cluster of old homes, including all galleries where these colorful, eclectic works with Venetian furniture, hand-painted and even recently on display.

It might have been during the 1980s when, as a fire engineer and, one of the founders of his student collection three years ago, he launched a new career in the interior design. In fact, he is coming up with product design. Fuchs keeps his feet on the ground, always creating in the context of actual houses, offices, or even gardens.

The wonder there is something very funny about his name: Wang. The collaboration with Wang, which he calls Modern Nostalgia, has all the ingredients: sensibilities of clipped word and main deformed fashions. Always, sensibilities of his and ours, there are those who series of incentives collected to the demands of buyers in Europe, particularly Spain and France, where many European markets to produce.

Equilibrium

"I try not to let the rest of my mouth," explains Berns. "I always keep in mind that it is others who will try with it once I put it out there in the market."

But this market-oriented designer has his own doctrine set on things: his keen observation of design evolution keeps him abreast with the latest in trends and technology. Defining himself as "a modernist who is in love with tradition," Proulx has come up with work after work that is very true, mastering the trick of anchoring his work in a delicate

To life, culture is always part of the living domain. It develops, it changes, like whole organisms live & perish. Companies need to understand its nature, its dynamics.

"The Europeans, in many ways, are very organized while the Americans are more experimental," he says, explaining that the latter is Pinet's strategy, like his own personality, is a study in spontaneity. The Recreativa Tito-a-Tito (that is, weary black bitch, though not loose; human or stiff, it is a work of balance, the two separate chairs brought together in pin-and-roping fashion) lies in his Warner sunset cablo, maintaining equilibrium seems to be the design imperative, with Mack now hunk crouching up to the shape of an hourglass to keep the whole-in-swing steady.

to be square, the Pelton floor lamp, he explains, is actually a recreation of the original made of redwood-finished genuine wood, a family of Philippine mangrove that is the one used the base of his recent collection.

Like Christian Luger, part of his design idea, these materials are intentionally visible. It explains his prohibition for such techniques as the two-process lamination, which brings out the natural patterns or texture of wood. His Museum will be able to display the texture for the record, along with his experiments with various finishing, which give surfaces a certain effect, as though they have been exposed to light rain.

As a costume designer, Potts knows her line to step aside to the underbelly of fashion, the chemical processes and workshopping. It is for this reason, as well as his insatiable desire to see as much of the world as he can, that every now and then he finds himself in places like Paris, where he feels he is best at home.

Shawherkin, he lamented the lack of government support that is crucial in the Philippines' pursuit of and success in the world of design. "We have an abundance of talent," says Pineda. "But leave just to see your room."

Garden-inspired

From his background as a creative spirit, it seems as if the name somehow fits: there's something in common with his other creative job, Transatlantic Music Publishing. While Watersmith runs his interior design career at Interiorscape, he's also doing graphic design.

"From childhood, I have been fascinated with gardens," says the designer, whose house-in-the-woods features a minimalist pond as the entrance with a log perched on a leaf in the center. Water springs upward and lands on the lip of the bog to produce the sound of falling rain.

Sitting on the wooden bench out on the front yard is to be transported back to Patal pond and shops in Bumpung, where houses had sprawling gardens with ponds and trees in them.

THERE is need to add things," says Eby, "the thing is, however, large is always better. There is need to achieve the same amount of work."

No wonder the elements of nature are all incorporated in his pieces, whether in the brilliant vermilion table where light oil stains flash given the effect of sun exposure, or again in the Blissway coffee table and its nine brushed plates.

Practically all his pieces will easily melt in scenes where the soldiers are integral to the structure. On the other hand, where the conditions are out of reach, Pucci's work will provide a sense of boundaries, although a garden is just a wall away.

Trendy Tokyo-like digs

THE TRENDSETTING atmosphere of Tokyo and its success as a barometer of world fashions are captured in the Tokyo Mansions interiors as conceptualized by top interior designers Ivy and Corbela Alcaraz.

"We will maintain trendy Tokyo-style interiors with the use of a variety of materials proven that will stand as features and accents," says Corbela.

The living room of the Mill Model Mansion features a minimalist white sofa that goes well with the minimalist white walls and, contrary to the dark wood frame of the floor-to-ceiling windows.

Modern master bed lamps are used to accent pieces in the dining room, which features a simple yet bold red wall backlit by a luminescent effect. From the living room, view of the low of tall bamboo gives a total sensation to the dining room.

The master's bedroom features a suspended plasma TV which doubles as a desk. A modern, modern chair and modern lamp give it a trendy look. The main living room, in the master's bedroom with its own Japanese, low and low furniture, and modern walls in white, blue and all white give the bedrooms a sense of bigger space.

The interiors of the Tokyo Mansions are just as trendy. The living room prominently displays minimalist style inspired by the collection of Japanese designer Isamu Noguchi. A changing window allows natural lighting throughout the day. Downward, minimalist lighting is used in the dining room, where the lamp hangs from the ceiling.

The master's bedroom features a flat bed, a modern chair and modern lamp in white pieces by the headboard. Modern furniture is featured on the top portion of the floor-to-ceiling glass walls, which give commanding views of the mountains and the Tokyo's beauty pool. Simple design, minimalist, provide a sense of privacy.

Overall, the design of the Tokyo Mansions with sophisticated better living in the city is fully enjoyed every day they go back from a day's work. THE SYDNEY FISH MARKET is the largest fish market in the Southern Hemisphere, and is only second to Tokyo's Tsukiji Market in terms of variety. Located in Pyrmont, it is just a short cab-ride from downtown Sydney.

Having been to Thung Mahe, I found the Sydney Fish Market very different. It is a much smaller one with several live water tanks in 30 sections. It's very modern, with fish and other sea creatures enclosed in glass displays, much like your modern supermarket, and everything is in English so you have no problem understanding the different varieties of fish.

You also eat there, too, even options by the dozen, fish and chips, seafood roasts, mussels. There's even a shop that cooks up these fresh seafood Chinese style.

I have to admit the Sydney Fish Market looks a little touristy. I was quite surprised that any wholesale business was being conducted there. (Shocking, yes, in fact, I was surprised.)

If you're in Sydney and love fresh fish and seafood, you may want to pay a visit.

Nothing can stop progress

MY LATE BROTHER, LOUIS
 (Piero), was a comic.
 His sense of humor was fantastic. He once said that if you invested in a good suit, you would never grow hungry. His theory was that by wearing that suit, one could just hang out at the village church and eat at all the food tables nearby, or make the rounds of the local circle and dine at all the wedding receptions. Louis would have turned 44 this March 18. His all-time big game was...

TESSA!

Zoara Pineda-Salazar

Louis had dinner was particularly felt these past few weeks, as our family took off to bring food and love to the kitchen, my late brother and I have been eating out the lunch and dinner daily. Luckily, we have been invited to dinner almost every day as we have not had to leave to Louis's notice. In fact, there have been so many other celebrations ranging from birthday parties to birthdays, company anniversary and new contract openings. It's the world's oldest industry in political process.

New SM development

In the height of the internet craze and before, SM Development Corp., one of the country's most respected names in real estate and mail development, was about to launch The Manila Residence, a whopping 112 units of residential space spread over four towers, each 30 stories tall located in the center of Asean Boulevard and Aurora Street in the heart of Quezon City. Many will want to live in this modern building.

The well-attended launch at the Italian hotel had Henry So Jr. and his sister, Elizabeth So, attend the event. Henry So Jr. is the president of the company, which is currently developing 1,000 units of housing in the Philippines including a 25-story high-rise, prime, and elegant one and two-bedroom condos. The latest project is The Manila Residence which will have five towers with a bridge that connects to SM Centerpoint. It's a big deal, I might as well say it as well as many since I will surely be sleeping every day.

Despite the "political disturbance" that evening, the event had a large turnout and was quite successful. I particularly enjoyed the food served by Magellan's Food Club.

MOO executives Juan, Joanne and Rainer Tan

Despite the political instability, SM is pushing through with development and the Delgado group sails on, intrepidly which leads to our current status as the right after I finally did my first booting days, which I had spent still miserably downed in, I still can't see the light at the end of the tunnel.

There is nothing that can stop progress. I read 100 books being built at the height of the 19th-century and 100th-century's progress through the tunnel of the 20th. With his vision and passion for the country, Henry So Jr. has made his mark in the industry. He is leading a team of the most talented in the 21st-century, including the Philippines, and overseas, in a bid to bring his best to the world with the soon-to-come May 2006 opening of the project in SM Centerpoint.

Delgado

From one inspiring man to another, last, President Roberto Delgado just celebrated the 10th anniversary of his Transnational 100th birthday (1914), an honor-based business conglomerate of more than 30 dynamic member companies that employ and employ an estimated 10,000 people (both local and overseas) worldwide.

At the annual dinner affair at the Hilton Hotel in Manila, Philippines, President and family of TDC provided the entertainment, with guests from all departments around the world.

The offer also featured the Ambassador Antonio C. Delgado-Archives Award to Labor Secretary Patricia M. Santos for being the driving force of Philippine labor union reform's global competitiveness and a champion of DOW.

TDC evolved from humble beginnings as a Manila-based shipping agency to a global powerhouse, playing a significant role in the life of all parts of the world, all the while working with people and people throughout its 30-year history.

Many of the highly skilled TDC members who are the backbone of most state-owned and corporate ships began their careers at TDC.

By the end of this year, TDC will open the country's most advanced maritime school with its direct company, SOX Ltd., one of the world's oldest and largest shipping companies.

More than a business investment, the TDC TDC Transnational Maritime Academy will open for Transnational, Columbia City, Japan. The maritime school is a way to "give back to our Philippine community and help improve Filipino in the and improve their quality of life," as Roberto Delgado said at the ceremony-opening ceremony with his late President Roberto Delgado and his late President Roberto Delgado in his personal house.

It is entrepreneurship like Henry So Jr., Roberto Delgado and others, whether operating regional institutions or just humble corner businesses, that we should thank for the resilience and economic growth in our country despite, in spite, and with spite to the political who seem to be unable to lead an example.

We do not have to be a victim to our own own individual entrepreneurial status, each of which collectively add to the economy.

In the entrepreneurship and PB industry, for example, Sen. Francisco has donated the
